

Epilepsy Surgery Support Group

UHN

For people who have had or are about to have epilepsy surgery, it's an opportunity to:

- ❖ meet others
- ❖ share experiences
- ❖ learn from and support each other
- ❖ hear from knowledgeable guest speakers

Why join the Epilepsy Surgery Support Group?

Many people living with epilepsy are able to manage their seizures and maintain a good quality of life with the help of anti-epileptic medications. However, some people do not respond well to these medications, while others develop side effects that may affect their quality of life further. Today, there's another treatment option available – surgery.

If you are considering having epilepsy surgery, you are encouraged to participate in the Epilepsy Surgery Support Group. The support group brings together people who have already had surgery with those considering it. There is an opportunity to talk about your concerns and fears, learn about surgical options and hear from those who have had surgery.

It's an opportunity to learn from each other and support each other. On occasion, leading epilepsy experts will present on topics that range from new research advancements to lifestyle issues important for maintaining good health.
